Before a space is open, and the one way opening one fails.

Home — empty state

The brand, then the two ways in

A screen with one job says what that job is before it offers anything: choose a folder, or clone one.

A recent space names its branch

Each row is the space, the folder it is in, and the branch it was left on — coming back to the wrong branch is the one surprise this screen can prevent.

Forgetting never touches the folder

A space is dropped from its own row, by a control that appears there and nowhere else. The list is the app's memory, not the disk's.

Cloning is drawn, not hidden

Shown disabled with its milestone beside it, because a control that appears later moves everything under it.
